A number of dogs have been shot in the township since the quarantine went into effect a week ago. A dog was shot in Mokena the forepart of the week while foaming at the mouth. All dog lovers are urged to keep their pets tied up in their yards or to keep them in an enclosure. Not to be outdone the Lions also scored three easy hits when Lions Sangmeister and Semmler brought in a step ladder and placed it under their basket while Lion Krusemark dropped the ball in the basket three times, tying the firemen's score. Honey in New Role With Housewife As War Brings on Sugar Rationing

By CHARLES A. SINGLER
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"Every household in the nation should get itself into the sugar rationing habit now, before the government's rationing plan goes into effect," says Dan A. West, Director of the Consumer Division of the Office of Price Administration. Mr. West also urges consumers who have hoarded large supplies of sugar to "divvy up" with their friends and neighbors.

"Rationing means share and share alike," Mr. West said, "and if we're really serious about sharing the burdens of this war fairly, here's a good chance for us to begin doing it in our communities."

Consumers will have to certify the amount of sugar they have on hand when they register for war ration book No. 1. For all sugar in excess of two pounds per person, stamps will be torn out of the ration books, preventing further purchase of sugar until the hoards are used up. False certification will be punishable under the United States criminal code. Under the rationing plan, sales of sugar will be restricted to something less than a pound of sugar per person per week.

Main Sources of Sugar.

Prior to our entrance into the war our main sources of sugar have been the Philippines (16 per cent); Hawaii (14 per cent); domestic beet (23 per cent); domestic cane, (6 per cent); Puerto Rico, (12 per cent); Cuba, (29 per cent). Thus we see at a glance that sugar has come to us from far places, that it is by no means an exclusively U. S. product, and that war in the seven seas is bound to lay a heavy hand upon the free supplies which have hitherto come to the American table. To help offset this, it is quite likely that beet and cane sugar acreages in the United States will be greatly increased this year.

In any event, the sugar rationing program is a certainty, and, face to face with it, many people with a sweet tooth are going to be thinking in terms of honey as a substitute for sugar very soon. Honey, a strictly made-in-America product, is even now crowding up front for its place in the spotlight. Bee culture is not confined to any particular section of the country, but is common to all sections. Honey is a logical, and perhaps the only, substitute for sugar, and should meet with no difficulty whatever in fitting into the wartime program.

After all, what is better than waffles and honey, or honey on toast? Pastries made with honey instead of with sugar are extra delicious, and honey adds extra zest to the cereals we eat for breakfast.

There are honey desserts and honey sauces galore, honey cookies and honey bread. Bakers very well know that honey has no equal in keeping cakes soft and moist for long periods of time, even for months. Many tasty candies can be made with honey, such as nougats, taffy, fudge and lollipops. Coffee or tea that has been sweetened with honey misses nothing at all, and will be approved by all lovers of these beverages. Try it some time.

Quick Service of Energy.

The fact that honey is a quick source of energy is well known. Many athletes use honey just before and during their work because of its ability to supply quick energy. Not only is honey prized as a quick source of energy, but it is an A-1 blood builder, too.

Honey will also come to the aid of housewives during the canning season. Fruits canned with honey instead of sugar lack nothing at all in the way of deliciousness or keeping qualities.

In caloric value a tablespoonful of honey is equal to 1½ tablespoonfuls

United States Looks Southward for War Rubber Supplies

Rubber supplies must stretch like rubber itself. This was forcibly brought home to American motorists with the recent rationing regulations for automobile tires. The United States is the greatest consumer of rubber in the world.

"British Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies long have been the United States' chief source of rubber, with large shipments also from the island of Ceylon, French Indo-China, and other eastern sources,"

A trap devised to collect pollen for experiments on the growth-regulating powers of different kinds of pollen. It consists of square meshed hardware cloth placed parallel and about one-half inch apart at entrance to bee hive. of maple syrup. The average honey contains about 40 per cent levulose, 34 per cent dextrose, and between 1 and 2 per cent sucrose. As a food it is predominantly alkaline; therefore, very wholesome.

Honey is sold in small square boxes, in the comb, and strained honey is sold in glass jars or in pails, usually of five pounds net weight.

The price of honey is in the neighborhood of 15 cents a pound, but lower prices prevail on honey sold in larger containers. For instance, a five-pound pail of honey will cost anywhere from 45 to 65 cents, depending on the quality and the value-giving reputation of the store where the purchase is made. Nearly every grocery store carries honey, and it can also be obtained at many stands along the highway. Beekeepers located on highways do not often overlook this opportunity to dispose of their product first hand.

What Bee Keepers Wear.

A bee farm is called an apiary, and the tenants of a hive are called a colony. The bee hive is usually made of wood, with a cover which the bee keeper can take off. The keeper usually wears a "bee veil" over his hat and pulled down over his face. However, many bee men prefer wire cloth head protectors to screen themselves away from the little insects, which do not sting as readily as generally supposed, but whose sting is something to be avoided. As bees are sensitive to cold and dampness, the hives are usually placed on boxes or stands to keep them off the ground.

Honey as a food product rises measurably in our estimation when we take a little time out to consider how it is made. And as the honey bee has now been enlisted in the Food-for-Victory program "for the duration" it may be well right here to consider a few of the outstanding facts in the life of the bee—our smallest patriot—which, only a half inch long and a quarter of an inch high, is going to do the big job of taking up the slack in the matter of sweets because of the sugar rationing program.

No attempt will be made here to go into the details of the bees' complex civilization—a civilization which has inspired awe in the minds of thinkers since the days of early Rome, for even the Elder Pliny wrote about them—but to review some of the facts that may give us a closer understanding of the busy little worker who has now been aligned on the Allied side.

There are more believe-it-or-nots in the life of the bee than any other insect. In fact, the bee is unique among insects, for it is the only insect that man has succeeded in domesticating.

Where Bees Get Nectar.

The source of honey is the purest that one can imagine—the nectar which nature has stowed away in red and white clover, in apple and orange blossoms, in buckwheat, wild aster, goldenrod and many other flowers, and even in the lowly sage. In other words, honey is not factory-made, but comes to us via the bee-line route fresh from nature's gardens. Who could ask for anything purer or better?

If people only knew what a pound of honey represents in bee travel, they would have a keener appreciation of the bee's liquid gold, which is destined to pinch hit for the "white gold," known as sugar, in many roles.

A spoonful of honey means many foraging trips for a great many bees. It is estimated that every pound of honey represents a combined flight mileage of approximately 50,000 miles—or two circuits of the globe at the equator. In fact, one bee could not produce one pound of honey in a lifetime, and, incidentally, a bee's lifetime during the honey season is only about six weeks. This is, in itself, an indication of how vigorously they put in their time.

Honey bees do not mix their drinks. In other words, bees that start their day with clover blossoms will continue with clover blossoms throughout the day, or until the yield of nectar from clover blossoms becomes too thin. This disposition to "stay with it" makes possible definite brands of honey, such as buckwheat honey, which would not be in the market if the bees were indiscriminate in the selection of the flowers they visit. Ordinary honey is pale yellow, while buckwheat honey is much deeper in color, and much stronger in taste. There is much less of it on the market, of course, and some people do not like it. On the other hand, once a buckwheat taste has been acquired, the preference is usually for that brand of honey.

The bee speeds from flower to flower at about a 15 m.p.h. rate, and its cruising range is about one or two miles from the hive. Bees have an unerring directional instinct that invariably brings them back to their own hive. The nectar it carries is approximately one-half its weight.

Honey Bee An Engineer.

The comb built by the honey bee is a masterpiece of engineering, consisting of hexagonal cells that are amazingly uniform, and tilted at just the right angle to prevent the honey from running out. The geometrical accuracy of the comb has been the marvel of the ages, and has captured the full attention of master-minds such as Fabre and Maeterlinck and Huber, to whom we are so heavily indebted for what knowledge we have of the bee and its crowded city.

One of the most interesting chapters in the life of the bee occurs in the autumn, when they eject the males from the hive. All summer long, when nectar has been plentiful and easy to get, the males, or drones, have gotten along well enough with the workers, sharing the same hive, but they have been permitted to stay on sufferance only. They never were really wanted, but their presence was essential to the continued life and expansion of the bee city. When the first crisp days of fall come along there is a marked change in the attitude of the worker bees towards the males. The drones are no longer wanted in the hive, for they have not been producers. Faking the hint, some of the drones take to their wings and go off on their own, but certain doom faces them, for winter is ahead, and they have made no provision against it, nor can they stand the cold.

Bee Needs Company.

The honey bee, it should be understood, is not and cannot be a "loner." It is part and parcel of an insect city, the most highly organized society in the world, and once deprived of its citizenship certain death soon follows.

Some of the drones return to the hive for a handout, but are barred by the bees that guard the honey vaults. Eventually they are driven out.

The swarm is the Roman holiday of the bee—and the only time in its brief and busy life when it has a bit of fun. On this occasion half the hive may follow the queen bee on a great new adventure. The queen, having alighted on some branch or other object, the worker bees cluster around her in a great, seething, buzzing ball. When bees swarm in this manner they will not return to their old home. However, the alert bee keeper is all ready for just such emergencies. He has prepared a new hive where a new city of wax will soon be started.

Indian Story of Monster 'Ape Men' Again Is Spiked

Big Grizzly Bear on Prowl Fits Into Legend of Hairy Giants.

VANCOUVER.—A giant, marauding grizzly bear may explain the revival of the strange story of a tribe of "hairy monsters that look like men" who supposedly roam the wilds of southern British Columbia spreading terror among the Indians.

The story was revived after Mrs. George Chapman of Ruby Creek reported that a "hairy giant," 10 feet tall and "having the shape of a man covered with shaggy brown hair," had chased her and her four children from their home in the woods near Ruby Creek, 100 miles east of here. It was the third time in two years that the "monster" was reported to be "on the prowl."

News of the appearance of the giant spread terror among the Indians in the area—until they closely examined the tracks left by the "thing" and decided—with a sigh of relief—that it was probably a bear after all.

Children Scream Warning.

Mrs. Chapman had reported that her four children were playing in the back yard when they saw the "monster" approaching and fled screaming into the house.

"I looked to see what had frightened the children and saw a huge hairy man about 10 feet tall coming from the direction of the barn," she said. "We fled to the woods and stayed there in the pouring rain for three hours before we dared go back to the house."

By that time, she said, the "giant" had gone, leaving his tracks in the soft ground on the bank of the Fraser river and in the woodshed, which it almost wrecked, apparently in search of food.

Mrs. Chapman said that the tracks left by the monster were 16 inches long and five inches across the heel and eight inches at the broad part of the foot.

Tracks Like Bear's.

White settlers and Indian leaders, recalling previous stories about the mysterious giants, came to examine the tracks, however, and agreed they could have been made by a giant bear that had come out of the mountain to forage for food.

The Indians believe that a strange tribe of "susquash" or "giants" inhabit the country north of Deroche and Harrison lake and leave their cave homes periodically to roam over a wide area, never stopping long at any one place. The Indians say they have seen the "monsters" twice before in the last five years—once on Seabird island and once near Chahalis.

Intruder Seized Asleep

In Apartment Bathub

SAN FRANCISCO.—Emil Olin's insistence on catching up on his sleep at a Mission street apartment house where he was not a tenant landed him in the county jail today.

Miss Evelyn Schwartz, manager of the apartment house, said that for several months she had been finding him sleeping "on front steps, back steps, hallways, the attic, the basement, out-of-way corners." The climax came when a tenant found Olin asleep in the bathtub of her apartment.

Olin's explanation was his former wife used to live at the apartment house and when he became lonesome for her he went there to sleep.

Gives His German Medals

To a Scrap Metal Fund

ALTON, ILL.—Medals he received for heroism and bravery as a German soldier in the first World war will be made into anti-Axis bullets for this war, is the hope of Karl Kuhn, Alton plasterer. Although a naturalized citizen of the United States for many years, Kuhn had treasured the medals until war was declared.

"The Germany I knew is dead," Kuhn explained as he gave the distinguished service medal and the Iron Cross to a scrap metal fund. "These medals are badges of honor I can no longer wear with honor."

Eiffel Tower May Be Put

On Scrap Heap by Petain

BERLIN.—The 984-foot Eiffel tower in Paris, known to millions since it was built 52 years ago, may be scrapped by a national metal collection committee working under Marshal Henri Petain, a Vichy dispatch said recently.

The committee is charged with destroying "certain edifices presenting no artistic or historic interest." Novelist Henry Bordeaux, French Academy member, was quoted as saying the tower was "an insult to aesthetic taste."

Sleep-Walker Is Saved

From Fall by Mother

PHILADELPHIA.—John Tobin, 40 years old, sleep-walked right through a second-story bedroom here, but—

His 75-year-old mother, who had heard him moving about, dashed into the room just as he tumbled through the pane, grabbed him by a leg and held on until her screams brought aid.

He's recovering in a hospital. Possibly he's making plans to prevent any further night walking tours.

Great Value of Fighter
Planes Now Being Understood by Using Defense of Britain as Example... Non-
Defense Agency Heads
Worrying...

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Just as the effectiveness in military strategy—as distinguished from mere destruction and terrorism—of the bomber was overestimated in the early stages of the war, so the fighter and the torpedo plane, especially the latter, were underestimated.

The huge production promised by President Roosevelt in his address to congress included all types of planes. There is a strong feeling, however, that a larger quota of the planes should be fighters and torpedo planes and a smaller proportion of bombers than is now contemplated.

Curiously enough, the "fighter" plane is really more a defensive than an offensive weapon while the heavy bomber is primarily an offensive weapon.

Fighter planes are essential to protect bombers, because a fighter plane can make short work of a bomber, a dive bomber or a torpedo plane if it catches one of these without protection from other fighters.

It was the concentration of British fighter planes against German bombers which was one of the chief reasons for the failure of the Nazis to crush Britain early in the fall of 1940. Goering sent over plenty of fighters, but the British fighters had strict orders to avoid combat with them whenever possible, and concentrate on the invading bombers.

A Murderous Toll

This policy, coupled with the fortunate circumstance that Sir Hugh Dowling had forced the equipment of the British fighters with such heavy fire power (failure to do which explains the utter futility of the much vaunted Italian military aviation) took a murderous toll of the invaders. Some think it was this toll which defeated the Nazi objective. Some think the Germans would have won had they decided to pay the price.

It was after this that the torpedo plane came into its own. The theories of the admirals, British as well as our own, about the almost invulnerability of battleships to air attacks, have been partially justified so far as bombers are concerned. But the torpedo plane has proved the deadliest foe of the big battle wagons. It was these planes which smashed Italian ships at Taranto. It was a plane-fired torpedo which crippled the Bismarck's ability to steer; torpedoes which sank the Prince of Wales and the Repulse.

Strangely enough, the only battleship sunk by a bomb in the whole war so far has been a Japanese vessel, sunk by one of our army bombers.

The idea of bombing Germany into submission has been abandoned. This means that more emphasis from now on must be placed on other types of planes, against the day of expeditionary forces promised by the President.

Capitol Workers

Can't Change Jobs

The idea that national defense would be best served, and local Washington's housing and transportation problems rendered less difficult, by transferring competent workers from reform and other non-defense agencies to the war agencies came to a number of high government officials, including cabinet members, who realized that if this sort of thing started there was no telling where it might stop—or what might happen to their place in the sun as a result.

The first red light was seen by these officials, far more concerned about conserving their own power than anything else, when lend-lease operations really began moving. Then when OPM began to function, needing an army of new clerks and stenographers as well as officials, came a deluge of requests by employees to move from the non-defense agencies to OPM, to the war department, to the navy department, etc.

Immediately the ban was clapped down. Workers in existing reform and other non-defense agencies positively would not be permitted to switch over. They were even forbidden to apply for work in the new agencies!

Probably the most amusing case was that of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, who was so worried when some of the political appointees actually moved over. The joke here is that every department head is supposed to be delighted when any excuse takes a political appointee away from him, on the theory that a non-political appointee is more efficient and does more work for less salary.

But Mr. Wickard—and other heads of non-defense agencies—didn't like this prospect. They wanted the political as well as the less influential employees to stay right with them.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT FOURTEEN

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, who has come to Honolulu to press her claims to the island estate of Alakoa, learns that she is not an heiress at all, as her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, is still alive and on his way to the island. She and Tonga Dick or Richard Wayne, a member of the Wayne family which has been in control of the property since her grandfather's disappearance, find they are in love and decide to leave the island of Alakoa together. Out at sea they quarrel and angered, Dick orders a return to Alakoa. Meantime a native house-girl who has stowed away aboard ship is seriously wounded by her native lover, who suspects her of being unfaithful. Karen accuses Dick of having made love to this girl, Lilua. Dick and Karen continue their quarrel and Dick tells her he has protected her in a serious situation.

Now continue with the story.

"Protected? What situations?"

"What would have happened to your claim on Alakoa if you had been held on suspicion of murder?"

Karen's astonished eyes jerked to his face. "Murder?" she gasped. "What on earth are you talking about?"

"What do you think my brothers would have done if they had found out that you were with James Wayne when he died?"

"But—but—"

"Oh, I know you didn't mean to harm him. Even without the call it excitement of seeing you, I dare say he wouldn't have lasted another twenty-four hours. But you know how Willard and Ernest would have seized upon the fact that you were with him—and sought to conceal it. The investigation would have been an ugly and uncomfortable thing."

"I with him?" Karen repeated incredulously. "Why, Dick—"

"You see," Dick said, "you're not honest with me even yet. Who did you think picked up the broken lei? Tsura? Dear God! I'll never smell ginger flowers again without remembering—"

"Lei? What lei?"

"The lei I gave you, that I brought to your room, the night my uncle died. The lei that you wore when you went to see him. The lei that broke, and still lay scattered all over the floor when I found him sitting there, dead."

"You mean—you mean—you've thought all this time—"

"I picked up the lei; I opened the windows, and let the wind sweep away the smell of ginger flowers, and said nothing. I even respected your own silence, and said nothing to you."

"I think," Karen said, "I could have forgiven anything in the world but that. This is too much, Dick."

"You see," Dick said, "I believed in you—I believed in you as I haven't believed in anything since I can remember. God help me, I believe in you yet! But I can't any longer believe that you are for me."

"No," Karen said, her voice strange and shaky, "not for you. Never for you again."

"Again? You never were!"

"When you came for me, and I ran away with you, from the Seal, I belonged to you as much as I'll ever belong to anybody. More, perhaps. Even when you—when Lilua turned up in your cabin, in that savage, half-naked rig, I was disgusted and hurt, but I would have got over it, I think. Only—I didn't know you then."

"You think you know me now?"

"As well as I ever care to, Dick."

When the Holokai was anchored again in Alakoa's little bay, Dick Wayne had Karen rowed back to the Seal, from which he had taken her such a little while before. They had been gone less than two hours, yet the circumstances under which he had brought her to the Holokai from the Seal seemed so far away that they might have existed in another world.

As she left the Holokai he offered her a steady hand, to help her into the small boat, but she stepped down lightly without his help, hardly glancing at him. They had nothing to say to each other as she left.

The Holokai's boat had hardly left her side when Alakoa's shore launch put out from the dock, bringing the doctor for whom Dick had radioed. The same Japanese physician who had attended James Wayne came aboard the Holokai briskly, looking as gravely worried as his round moon of a face would permit. Dick took him below at once.

Lilua was resting more quietly, now, under the detachedly watchful eyes of the Chinese mess boy and the Filipino cook.

"This girl has been stabbed," Dick told Dr. Shimazu shortly. "Very little has been done. Don't leave her until she can properly be moved."

The Japanese, evidently interested by the notion that Dick might have stabbed the girl himself, gave Dick Wayne a shrewd and curious look, but without learning anything; and Dick went on deck.

Garrett Waterson's vessel was standing in by now. Already the mournful blasts of her whistle were calling for a pilot. Dick Wayne dropped overside into the launch, drove it out of the bay in a short-cut through the boil of the breakers, and went aboard the Sarah. A stocky Norwegian with a curly brown beard—his name was Stahl-quint—met him at the rail, and paced beside Dick as he went to the wheel.

"You see," Inyashi said, uneasy under Dick's stare, "if we send no pilot, Mr. Colt and Miss Waterson will have to stay here."

"Might as well kick her on in," Stahlquist said gloomily. "The Old Man's in another fever siege; wouldn't know you probably, even if you could get him awake."

"How long's he sick?" "It comes off and on. You know how he is. He'll be all right when he wakes up. Probably be four or five hours; then he'll be himself for a while, and raising hell. I don't know what we're coming to."

Dick took the wheel, signaled his engines, and snaked the Sarah in through the coral. He anchored her between the Holokai and the Seal.

"You're in for it," Stahlquist encouraged him. "All the way up, the Old Man's been raving and cussing at you for putting out with the Holokai without no orders."

"When he wakes up," Dick said, "tell him to keep his shirt on. There isn't anything here to get in a hurry about; not now."

Dick Wayne went back to the Holokai. On her deck he stood for a few moments, looking across at the Seal, and fumbling in his pockets for his pipe, which had become mislaid. He was still standing there when Inyashi came trotting to him.

"How's the Hawaiian girl who was hurt?" Dick asked at once.

"I think she is still—all right."

"Is she quiet now?"

"Most of the time. When she is not quiet, she is calling for this Hokano. The doctor gave her a shot of something, I think."

"Have somebody cut Hokano's wrists and ankles loose and bring him to me."

"Captain, that is dangerous. That man will try to kill you, I think."

"Do as I say, anyway."

"Yes, sir." Then, as Inyashi started away, he faltered and turned back. "Captain Dick, while you were gone, the Seal sent to ask for a pilot three times. They want to go out now, they think."

"They want to go out? Why, then, John Colt must have gone aboard."

"Oh, yes, sir, half an hour ago. I thought you knew that."

"Well—did you give them somebody?"

"No, Tonga."

"No?"

"You see," Inyashi said, uneasy under Dick's stare, "if we send no pilot, Mr. Colt and Miss Waterson will have to stay here."

A whole lifetime spent in the Islands had never fully accustomed Dick to the manner in which everyone managed to know everyone else's business. Just now it unexpectedly appeared that Inyashi not only knew all the ramifications of Dick's affairs, but had his own conception of what was good for Dick.

"What Mr. Colt and Miss Waterson do is their own business," Dick said unappreciatively.

"There's still time to send them a pilot, Captain Dick. Either Menehune or Kamaku could pilot those shoals in their sleep. We can send them a man, if we want."

"Yes," Dick said, so uncertainly that it was Inyashi's turn to stare, "we can—if we want."

"If Ramey goes alone he will pile up his boat."

"Pile her up," Dick repeated dimly. "Yes, that is exactly what he will do. Well, maybe that would be the best thing for us all. There wouldn't be any danger to anybody, I wouldn't think."

"No danger," Inyashi agreed eagerly. "No danger at all. But I think Ramey will not try."

"It's Colt who is deciding what to do. And maybe what Colt does is being decided by—somebody else."

"Sometimes," Inyashi said cautiously, "what people do in a hurry, when they are mad, is a big mistake."

"Inyashi, are you arguing with me?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, get out of here, and do as you are told. Wait! Send a man ashore. Tell him to pass the word on the beach that I'll knock the head off the man who pilots the Seal at any price. Ramey will get no pilot from the Holokai—and, by God, we'll see that he gets none from Alakoa!"

"Captain, I have done that."

"You've already passed the word on the beach?"

"Yes, Tonga; I thought I better take a chance."

"Good," Dick said. "Good enough! Now, go cut Hokano loose."

Dick went below, still listlessly hunting for his pipe. He was feeling empty and sunk. He poured himself half a tumbler of Scotch, drank it off, and deciding this had been a good idea, poured himself another. Dr. Shimazu came into the main cabin from the little stateroom in the stern.

"This girl is lucky," he said. "The knife seems to have turned and saved the lung. If it had not turned she would have been killed; as it is, she is not."

"Where's the luck in that?" Dick asked sourly. "Can't you even wish a poor Hawaiian girl well?"

"The girl is principally suffering from shock," Dr. Shimazu explained. "These Polynesians have a special temperament of their own; sometimes they are nervously excitable."

He stopped, and stared blankly at the companionway. Two rugged-looking Kanaka seamen had appeared, each of them holding onto a wrist of the huge Hokano. As soon as they had cleared the ladder, one of them twisted Hokano's arm up behind him in an effective hammerlock; and thus they stood waiting. Hokano's face was expressionless, and his eyes dead.

Dick Wayne's voice was harsh and level. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself," he said. "Don't you know how to teach that woman of yours a lesson without half killing her? You get on in there to her, and see if you can get her quiet."

Hokano flung Dick Wayne one wild, uninterpretable glance, then, moving unsteadily, he walked back to Dick's stateroom and disappeared.

Dick drank his whiskey and went on deck. What he wanted was to be quiet, and alone in the dark, like any animal which has been hurt and yet doesn't dare let its wounds be seen. But it seemed that in this night there was no quiet to be had. Dick Wayne had no more than walked to the rail of the Holokai when the Seal's boat was alongside, and there was a great clamoring for Captain Wayne—this time from Ramey himself.

"Well—what the hell is it now?" "Look, Tonga," the one-eyed Ramey whispered, "how about giving a guy a lift here, in a bad fix? How am I supposed to get out of this hole? How am I supposed to know where the channel is, in a black night like this? What's the matter with giving a guy a hand?"

"Just what is it you want, Ramey?" Dick asked, knowing well enough.

"Half the boys you've got aboard your tub are Alakoa Kanakas. What's the matter with lending me one to steer me out of here, before these people practically scalp me, by God? These people want to get going. I tell you, these people are raising hell because I don't jerk my anchor up. What the devil do you expect me to do, if you haven't the common decency to lend a man a—"

"Colt burning you up?" "Well, what if he is? Can you blame him if he wants to get his sweetie out of this lousy sink? All I'm asking is—"

"Tell you what you do," Dick said. "You tell Colt to take a flying jump into the bay. After he's jumped in the bay, tell him to dry himself thoroughly with a rough towel, and put on dry clothes. Explain to him that it's very foolish to stand around all wet."

"Damn it, can't you even lend a man—?"

"I'm not lending you anything. You're going to keep the Seal exactly where she is until it's light enough for you to sound your way out. Even then you may pile her up—and you know it! It suits me to have you and your customers stay exactly where you are."

"I tell you, Tonga, these people—"

"Steal a bottle of whiskey and go hide on shore. I'll give you no pilot tonight!"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

DISCOVERING WHY PEOPLE DRINK BEVERAGE ALCOHOL

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 43:34; Psalm 104:14, 15; Proverbs 31:4-7; Ecclesiastes 2:1-3, 10, 11; Isaiah 56:12; 1 Corinthians 10:5, 7.

GOLDEN TEXT—Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.—Proverbs 20:1.

The alcohol problem receives attention in four lessons of each year. This is the first one for 1942 and brings before us a number of scriptures not often used, in order to suggest the drinker's reasons for drinking. Other matters appear, but we shall limit ourselves to presenting these reasons, together with the Christian answer to each one.

Why do men drink?

I. To Be Sociable (Gen. 43:34).

At the banquet prepared by Joseph the allowance for Benjamin was greatly increased, and they "drank and were merry." How often that has been the plea which has led into drinking and into drunkenness. The "social glass" has often led to the drunkard's grave.

Well, surely God wants us to be sociable. Yes, He does, and the perfect provision for man's social nature is found in Christian fellowship.

II. To Be Happy (Ps. 104:14, 15).

Wine is supposed to bring happiness, and we may admit that it does bring a temporary lift which some call happiness. But who is satisfied with happiness? It depends entirely on what "happens." If the wrong thing happens we are unhappy. We need a deep abiding joy, and only a right relationship to God can give that.

III. To Evade Responsibility (Prov. 31:4, 5).

When life's burdens become too much for him the weakling seeks relief and evades his responsibilities in the deadening power of alcohol. But that doesn't solve the problem. It is still there when sobriety returns, and usually more serious than ever. What can a man do? The answer is, turn to God. He gives wisdom, grace and strength.

IV. To Forget Sorrow (Prov. 31:6).

"Drown your sorrows" is the deceptive promise of liquor; but they stand right there beside man, and when his poor befuddled head begins to clear they present themselves more persistently than ever. What's the answer? The God of all comfort is ready to bear man's sorrows or to give him grace to bear them and to lead him out into a place of peace and victory.

V. To Forget Poverty (Prov. 31:7).

Heavy is the affliction of poverty in a world of plenty. Sometimes it is the result of carelessness or of sin, but often it is the lot of those who are innocently caught in its grip. Men have tried to forget, to "drown" even this problem in drink, and have only made their poverty worse and more unbearable.

VI. To Find Satisfaction (Eccl. 2:1-3, 10, 11).

The book of Ecclesiastes gives the account of a man "under the sun," that is, apart from God's guidance and blessing, seeking to satisfy the cravings of his heart in many ways. All of them prove vain, including the effort to find it in wine and in pleasure.

Frustrated souls often seek release through intoxicants. They gain a measure of liberty and a sense of masterful power, but it is all as delusive as the dreams of grandeur of the insane. It is even worse, for it is a false condition, deliberately created and soon lost, together with lost character and decency of life. The morning after brings only the deepened despair of greater dissatisfaction.

VII. To Stimulate Hope (Isa. 56:12).

A certain fearful looking forward to the time of judgment tends to dampen the drinker's enthusiasm. So he drinks more to reawaken in his heart the "hope" that tomorrow will not bring reckoning, but will be another "good" day. The world has no real hope, in fact, the word itself has lost its true meaning and indicates only a sort of wishful thinking. Is there any real hope? Oh, yes, and the Christian has it, hope that is a confident expectation of the fulfillment of God's every promise. That kind of hope takes care of tomorrow—and all the tomorrows.

VIII. To Encourage Play (I Cor. 10:6, 7).

Paul warns against the folly of the "eat, drink, and be merry" philosophy. That road ends in disaster. Does not God want us to play? Indeed He does. He gave us the instinct for recreation. We need pleasant relaxation, and He has provided for us all the beauties of nature, all the pleasures of wholesome play, and all in the finest of fellowship with His people and with Himself. Thus we find real recreation—not just fun that leaves us empty and dissatisfied.

Pattern 7142

ENTERTAINING'S a joy when you've a beautiful crocheted dinner cloth to set off your fine china! Make this heirloom cloth in string. It's flit crocheted that has a clear chart to follow.

Salt meat requires longer boiling than fresh. Put it into cold water, quickly bring it to a boil, then let it simmer.

Leftover stock from cooked vegetables contains valuable minerals and vitamins. Save it to use in soups, stews, and sauces.

Always keep perfume in a dark place. Daylight will affect every odor differently, according to its formula. In extreme cases perfume turns bright red as soon as it has been exposed to the sun.

A tablespoon of granulated sugar mixed with the fat or meat drippings of a pot roast gives the roast a brown color and adds flavor to the stock and gravy.

When using a double boiler, the food will cook more quickly if the water in the outer vessel is salted in the proportion of a fourth of a cup of salt to one quart of water.

A siphon of charged water is an excellent fire extinguisher as the carbonic acid gas in the water helps to stifle the flames. The siphon can be tilted, and the fluid will carry to a considerable height such as the top of a blazing curtain.

Dampness often comes up through cracks in cement floors. To stop the cracks, chisel them to between a quarter and one-half inch wide, then fill them with hot tar. Specially prepared commercial cement can also be used.

Photographs that have become soiled may be made to look like new by washing them with a piece of white cotton wadding dipped in cold water. Do not use colored cotton wadding and never use soap, soap powder or ammonia—just cold water.

AMERICAN LEGION AUX.

Our social meeting of Unit 615 was held in the church social room, Friday, February 27. We were sorry to hear both our pres. and treasurer were ill and unable to attend. Our vice pres., Mrs. Hagedorn, filled the presiding chair very ably. The Ward Bread coupon books have been received and may be had from Mrs. Rowden. Payment for same must be returned within a month, so ladies get your books as soon as possible. If you don't know about this call Mrs. Rowden and she will explain. This is an easy way for the unit to realize a nice sum for their working fund.

After the meeting the hostesses served cherry pie, cookies and coffee, and bunco was played.

Mrs. Duley Murphy and Mrs. Myrtle Wolf helped sell defense stamps at Sears Roebuck's loop store, February 26. Mrs. Ruth Freitag worked at the Auxiliary Civilian Defense office at 35 E. Wacker Drive February 24.

LETTERS FROM THE BOYS

God Bless Our Censors, May They Never Be Stricken Blind.

5 January, 1942.

My dear Folks:

This letter will perhaps seem late. In times like these one has a hard time trying to keep a schedule of actions.

I presume you all have received my card. Rest assured that I was mighty pleased to be able to send it. By the way, when did it arrive? Might handy card too, saving one a lot of trouble trying to inform others of his well being. I sent cards to Marie and Charlie, Grandmother and Martha, to Helen Smith and a friend of mine in Milwaukee.

As this letter is to pass a rigid censorship I cannot give you all information as to what has happened out here. Let me say that I don't think it was nearly so bad as the newspapers would have one believe. Plenty of noise though.

The raid the Japanese made here may well loose them the war. We

Mrs. Freitag, Legislation chairman, presented the work of the Federation on legislation and Mrs. Crist spoke on safety.

After the singing of several songs, Mrs. Ebenhack, program chairman opened the program by reading the following declaration:

Jan Struther (Mrs. Miniver) recently was asked by an interviewer after a lecture in the middle west—what she liked best—how she liked America. Miss Struther gave an elaborated and heartfelt answer. "I don't like America, I love America," she said.

"Well then how do you love America," persisted the interviewer.

"I love America very dearly," said Miss Struther. "With admiration for its principles; with sympathy for its problems; with enthusiasm for its successes; with compassion for its failures; with respect for its past; with faith in its future; and above all, with a most deep affection for its people."

Following this, Mrs. Ebenhack presented the speaker of the afternoon, Elsie Clamage, noted Dramatic Book Reviewer. Her program was a dramatic interpretation of Edna Ferber's "Saratoga Trunk". Mrs. Clamage did not give the ordinary book review but presented an entirely new and different type of entertainment through dramatization. The characters of the book were brought to life and we could fairly see them re-enact their own vivid part in the novel.

Expressions of praise were forthcoming from all present.

The tea table was most appropriately decorated with a centerpiece of red carnations and white stock cup cakes with red, white and blue icings added their attractiveness to the setting.

Mrs. Pottberg as chairman assisted by Mrs. Bruder, Mrs. Christ and Mrs. Rensink. Mrs. Henry Breck and Mrs. Chas. Nielsen poured. All felt it was a most enjoyable afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Dunham have been ill for the past two weeks in their home where Mrs. Dunham is still confined.

Mrs. H. Hanrahan entertained the Tinley Park Bunco club last Thursday at the home of her mother.

Friday Mrs. Minnie Goessel had several friends call on her.

beaten and ready for peace. Now we are apt to compare our present situation to that period which is a very deadly assumption.

Do not be guilty of this act. Our total casualty list was only 125,000 men both killed and wounded. A fraction of what we must expect this time. Never since 1776 has the enemy been so strong and so close to our gates. Unless we stand together even closer than at Vally Forge we are lost. Ol Dan'l Webster said: Give me "Liberty or give me death". If all Americans feel this way we shall not fail.

Well I sold my automobile. In times like these it would be more of a liability than an asset. Sustained a bit of loss in the deal but war always was Hell, what.

Your bundle arrived intact Mom. Thanks very much for your wishes of well being and for the swell contents. Your letter also came recently. I think a lot of you too.

I'll have to close now as we have continual black outs and a blackout is really black, especially when our much vaunted Hawaiian moon is laid up for repairs.

To you all Irene, Andre, Navonne and Joanne I send my love. Your son and brother, Johnny.

Prvt. John Andrew Lahti, U. S. Naval Air Station Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

Fort Cronkhite, Cal.
February 19, 1942.

Dear Lulu:

Received your letter of the 14th OK and that is something as letters coming to me have a strange way of "not getting here."

Strange place, this Cronkhite, but no more queer than the people who dwell within it. I imagine that this letter will strike you as a little "off the beam", but will tell you all about it in person a few years from now. I'm sorry I failed to write, I hadn't forgotten, and with you having one soldier to write to already—our letters would probably read the same, so time drifted on. It's almost like a year now it seems like a day and an eternity in one. I'll never regret it tho'. beautiful country I've seen and fine people and friends have been found.

It's hard to imagine the changes that have taken place in Tinley. I still think of it as it was a year ago.

Sure glad you wrote, I was beginning to wonder if "Tinley" really did exist. That's nice that Emory came home for a visit. The war must be remote back there, as we out here can get away for only six hours at a time, sometimes not that. Sorry to hear about Mrs. Swisher's mother, its the first I've heard about it. So '38 soldier boys have left Tinley, the unusual part of it is that act that are all in different branches of the service.

Walter Siemsen was about a half mile away from me after the war was declared I rarely saw him. My dad wanted to see him when he was out here, but no one knew where he was when I called by telephone, in fact, nobody ever heard of him. "Queer place this Cronkhite". Only half a mile as the crow flies, but a tortuous mountain side by foot. I'll be home after the war is over, but as the humorist in the barracks says, "I'm going to look awfully funny going around with no head on my shoulders." Tch-tch some joke wot wot?

(Well, Lulu, I guess that's enough for this time. I'll say hello to Bert and Katherine and give regards to Emory, Fern and Howard, ohh all those I'll see again I doubt. (more corny humor) So long, Still the same KEN

Sheppard Falls, Texas

Dear Members of the Citizens Service Committee:

I received your letter Saturday noon was glad to hear from the Tinley Park people, that's one thing about the Tinley Park folks, they don't forget when any one leaves town.

I do like it down here in Texas, the weather has been nice most of the time. There was only a few days the first part of Jan. that was cold. We had just a little snow then, but since then the weather has been rather nice.

When the wind blows it is rather dusty around camp. We do not have any grass or trees in this place. I just got out of the hospital. I had the mumps. I spent 16 days in that place and did not like it. I will start back to school on the 27th of Feb.

Sheppard Field is about six miles from Wichita Falls we have 24 hour bus service, so we can get to town when ever we get off.

Right now I can't think of any thing I could use outside of stamps and Gem Razor Blades. My Serial Number is 36304517.

I want to thank the Citizens Service Committee for writing to me and also for sending the Tinley Park Times.

Yours Truly, Erwin A. Batterman 313th School Sqd., Sheppard Field Wichita Falls, Texas.

Erwin. We plan on sending Razor blades and stamps later on.

Camp Walters, Texas

Dear Folks:

How are You I'm fine, hope this letter finds you the same. I sure was glad to here from folks in good old Tinley. I think I know you, of course I know Bert Fulton and his family, glad to hear his son is doing all right in the Army. I'm down here in Texas. The Camp I'm at is around fifty miles south west of Ft. Worth. I'm in the Quarter Master Det. Corps. We haul all the supplies for the Army. I have a good job out here. I'm driving for Colonel Deahl. I drive a Fourtytwo Dodge and a Jeep. This Camp is located in a nice place. It's in a valley surrounded by trees and hills on all sides. In another two weeks everything should be turning green. John Lehman is out here. I haven't seen him as yet. Well my Serial number is 36048326. I don't know what to asked for. have every thing I need. Most of the Boys like to have cigarettes sent to them. The only thing I haven't got is a sweater my chest measurement is 38. I sure would appreciate the Tinley Park Paper. I don't know of any news. So, I close for now wishing the Citizens Service Committee of Tinley Park all the health and happiness in the world.

Sincerely, Norman Siebrant, Q. M. Det Corps, Camp Walters, Texas.

Norman Siebrant. Your request will be granted and a Sweater will be mailed to you very shortly. What kind of a razor do you use.

Citizen's Club

Tinley Park, Illinois.
I received your letter some time ago telling me of the formation of your club and the purpose it has in mind. I think it's a swell idea all the way through. I certainly enjoy getting letters and packages from home, and I know every other soldier does too. These small remembrances sort of make a fellow feel, even though he may be a long way from his family and friends, that he's not entirely forgotten, and it brings his home just a little bit closer. I returned to Camp Polk on Feb. 17th, having finished my course at Armored Force School at Fort Knox on the 14th. I certainly found a big change upon returning here.

When I left last Fall I knew every soldier in Company D, but found when I got back that I was lucky if I knew one out of five men due to the fact that many new recruits are coming in every day. Because of this expansion the older men of the company are sleeping in tents and the barracks have been turned over to the recruits. Living in a tent is OK. None of us mind it at all except when we have Louisiana's special brand of wind, sand and rain storms. We've had several bad wind storms the past two weeks, and then you feel sure the tent is going to blow over. So far none of them have. "Again" I would like to say I think the purpose of your club is fine and I'll certainly very greatly appreciate any favors shown me in carrying out your plans.

Sincerely,

Emory J. Fulton

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Christ Jesus" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 1st.

The Golden Text was, "God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4: 19).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven' (Matt. 16: 15, 16, 17).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The word Christ is not properly a synonym for Jesus, though it is commonly so used. Jesus was a human name, which belonged to him in common with other Hebrew boys and men, for it is identical with the name Joshua, the renowned Hebrew leader. On the other hand, Christ is not a name so much as the divine title of Jesus. Christ expresses God's spiritual, eternal nature." (p. 333).

OLD WORLD ATMOSPHERE IN FLOWER SHOW GARDEN

Designer V. J. Hajny overlooking the model of the Prague garden which he has designed for the National Flower and Garden Show at the International Amphitheater, March 15 to 22.

A formal old world estate garden overlooking a diorama of the ancient and beautiful city of Prague will be one of the breath-taking major exhibits at the National Flower and Garden Show returning to Chicago from March 15 to 22 at the International Amphitheatre. The Czechoslovakian Garden Club is sponsoring the exhibit.

The design and execution of this thrilling exhibit is the result of many long and patient hours of conscientious research, according to James Sykora, general chairman of the National Flower Show. From the time announcement was first made that the National Flower Show would return to Chicago, city of its inception in 1908, the Czechoslovakian Garden Club, an enthusiastic group of some 1,000 members, through its president, Joseph Brezina of La Grange, Illinois, began making plans to put into the show an exhibit representative of their organization.

From the garden of the monastery of the Bohemian knights of the Red Cross, a view is obtained which is one of the rarest in Europe. The stone bridge built by the "Father of his Country" King and Emperor Charles IV in 1357, spans the Vltava River.

"Visitors to Prague are always fascinated by its situation and atmosphere in which spires and domes, palaces and old roofs testify to the ancient power and glory of the town," said Dr. Jar E. Vojan, prominent Chicago Czechoslovakian author. This feeling of ancient and reverent beauty, the drama of storm and conflict, as if by magic is noted and preserved in the garden which will be presented at the National Flower and Garden Show.

Since both tea and climbing roses have always been prime favorites in Old World gardens, where often they grow more luxuriantly than in America, roses will occupy a prominent place in the planting of the garden proper. The somber green of evergreens will lend a stately and formal touch, the lines softened by trailing ivy. Blooming plants will include primroses, begonias and potted or specimen azaleas.

Perhaps the most novel and beautiful part of the entire exhibit, however, will be the "trick" lighting—indirect lighting, which by means of color changes, will portray the scene at various hours of the day. The sun will rise from behind the spires and domes of Castle Hradchany—and then nightfall will spread over the garden.

In addition to the Czechoslovakian Garden, other feature exhibits of the National Flower and Garden Show will include Crescendo Falls, a gigantic mountain and waterfall, the Victory Vegetable garden, timely and in keeping with the governmental program of a vegetable garden for every American home, a huge and lovely spring garden of tulips and daffodils, and a mammoth garden of June garden roses, featuring the newest of patented roses in a special "V" design.

In the Amateur Section, where exhibits of women's clubs, garden clubs and horticultural societies will be displayed, guests will have an opportunity to view not only small home gardens of flowers and vegetables, but new and original, as well as familiar ideas for window box planting and cultivation. The classification calling for sun parlor arrangements will undoubtedly bring out a scintillating array of house plants in flower stands and wall flower holders, while the shadow box and table arrangement class undoubtedly will bring out much hidden talent in the way of flower arrangement.

Advance sale tickets are now being sold at reduced prices by women's clubs, garden clubs and florists.

This Golden, Fluffy Omelet Captures Interest
(See Recipes Below)

Lenten Meals

Eggs, cheese, fish and vegetables—these are the foods that will be popular with the market basket during the next few weeks. If you are going to form the bases for your menu from these dishes cook them just as carefully as you do the meat that you use year 'round, for you can't take chances and let mealtime become dull or unattractive.

Point up fish and vegetables with lemon or other attractive sauces and flavorings. Serve your egg and macaroni dishes in attractive settings, with some carefully thought out garnish. Play up fruit and dessert numbers to lend interest to meals. If you heed these simple rules, I'm sure they'll make Lent especially attractive for you and your family.

Now, for some concrete help, I've chosen foods to fit the season. They're vitamin, mineral and interest-laden.

Macaroni Cheese Custard.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 package macaroni, cooked
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups grated cheese
2 tablespoons onion, chopped
2 tablespoons parsley, chopped
1 pimiento, chopped
Salt and pepper
2 cups evaporated milk

Combine ingredients and pour into a buttered baking dish. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate (375-degree) oven for 45 minutes.

An appetite-satisfying omelet? You can't believe it? Well, this one is, because it's made with a cream cheese and chive mixture that makes the omelet heartier, and also keeps it from shrinking discouragingly the moment it comes from the oven. A slow oven is essential to a fluffy, orange-gold omelet.

Cream Cheese Omelet.
(Serves 6)

¼ pound cream cheese with chives
3 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
Salt and pepper

Soften the chive cream cheese, blend in egg yolks one at a time. Add milk and seasonings. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a well-buttered, heavy frying pan and cook over low heat until bottom begins to brown. Then place in a moderate (325-degree) oven until the top is dry and the mixture firm. Fold and serve.

The name is goldenrod because the dish bears a close resemblance to a flower of that name. Just combine the goldenrod eggs with a tempting green spinach ring and you have a real Lenten treat:

Spinach Ring With Goldenrod Eggs.
(Serves 8)

4 pounds spinach
½ cup salad oil

Lynn Says:

Sauces that accent the best flavor in foods include these:

Lemon Butter: 2 parts butter to 1 part lemon juice. This is good on the leafy vegetables, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts and artichokes.

Vinegar Butter: Melt ½ cup butter, add 2 tablespoons vinegar and heat thoroughly. This is good on green beans.

Mustard Butter: Add just a bit of dry mustard to melted butter before pouring on vegetables. With this, onions, greens or broccoli are indicated.

Parsley Butter: Chop 3 to 4 tablespoons parsley fine, add to ½ cup melted butter.

Tart Sauce: (also good on fish) Put in double boiler 2 egg yolks, ¼ cup cream, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, flick of nutmeg. Cook until thick and creamy, stirring constantly about 2 minutes. Be careful not to overcook. Stir in slowly, 2 tablespoons butter and serve at once.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE!

If you are among those American adults who hesitantly applaud the flag at the movies and remain strangely unemotional when view of the fleet or of our fighting men are shown, you should attend a children's movie matinee. We did so the other day, and the way the kiddies stamped, clapped and shrieked at every view of Old Glory, an American warship or an American fighter appeared on the screen was good for the soul.

What's wrong with the grown-ups? Go into any movie and observe their feeble response to the same pictures. It's incredible. And a little depressing.

EXPLAINED!

An inquiry into fatal auto accidents in a small American town shows that 57 per cent of the school children have figured in at least one auto crash and that 28 per cent drive without licenses. Now we know why all those rural motorcycle cops hide in the side streets and behind shrubbery. They're afraid to come out in the open.

CURFEW JINGLES

A congressman who has introduced a bill to require a ten o'clock curfew for all female employees of the government in Washington in the interest of efficiency puts his idea in verse:

Early to bed and early to rise
Will help your complexion and brighten your eyes.

It strikes us that this doesn't quite get the point over. How about these? Promptly at ten leave your sky-larking chums;
Next morning when typing you won't be all thumbs.

Cut out late suppers and scorn syncope
And you won't fall asleep while taking dictation.

Get lots of rest; keep your head very clear
And your written "Dear Sir" may not come out "Dir Sear."

AMERICAN DIALOGUES

What time is it?
War time, daylight saving, Eastern standard, Chicago or will you take whatever I can give you?

Then there is the fellow who when asked for the time replied, "Right or wrong?"

—Buy Defense Bonds—
Private Purkey got a letter from a friend asking if the draft board would pass men with bad teeth. "With bad teeth!" he exclaimed in reply. "They'll take you now if you have guns left."

England is rationing soap. From now on when two or more people are in one tub they must use the same cake.

Famous last words: "Will you have two lumps or three, Mr. Henderson?"

Heifer Hooksey has been reading so much about rationing cards, stamps, etc., that as soon as daylight saving came in he went to a bureau and asked for a stamp entitling him to the right time.

Elmer Twitchell says he is losing his morale listening to some of the morale builders.

It is this department's feeling that behind the Normandie disaster is a great part of the story of America's major faults: a complete loss of efficiency as it was once interpreted, an "Oh yeah" attitude of the worker toward the boss, a decline in thoroughness and an almost total eclipse of pride in a job well done.

Ideal combination for the hunch-player of daily doubles, as observed the other day at Hialeah: Dreamy Eyes and Sizzling Pan.

—Buy Defense Bonds—
No more cans can be used for packing dog food. Now Ima Dodo will begin teaching Fido to eat regular table food.

We have a swell idea for a Dog Show cartoon: Hitler and Tojo standing in front of a kennel of wolf-hounds and chirping, "Almost human, aren't they?"

Elmer Twitchell says he is going to stop drinking the minute beer begins coming through in cardboard containers.

Under Daylight Saving we seem to be rationing nightlife!

"WANTED—Large feather pillow in A-1 condition; must be reasonable." Sullivan 27-4-11." —Lansing Spectator.

Listen, maybe you had better give up the whole idea of fancy skating.

L. K. Morehead says that a girl on duty as a plane spotter in Morristown, N. J., excitedly reported to the interceptor command that two planes and submarine were flying high over her post.

She had never seen a dirigible before.

PATTERNS

SEWING CIRCLE

1538-B

DOESN'T this picture of our two attractive aprons inspire you to start a sewing bee at once? Both are so pleasing in style and so easy to make! And either of them will add decided charm to your home attire.

One pattern, No. 1538-B gives complete directions, for making both styles. You'll like the pinafore for day-long duty. Slip it on over your head, tie it in back—and there it is, firmly adjusted, neatly in place no matter how active you may be. The wide gracefully shaped belt actually slims your figure at the waistline. The full skirt is generously cut to give your dress complete protection.

You'll certainly want several versions of the smaller apron! They can be so decorative in bright checked ginghams, striped chambrays and plain broadcloth.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1538-B is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) pinafore apron requires 2½ yards 35-inch material, 4½ yards ric-rac. Small apron, size 16, 2 yards 32-inch material. Send order to:

Difference in Days

How much longer and shorter, respectively, are the longest and shortest days of the year than the days next to them, is asked.

According to the U. S. Naval observatory, the difference in the length of day varies less than a minute from day to day in the weeks December 17-24, and June 17-24, in which the shortest and the longest day of the year occurs. Therefore, the difference in the length of day is less than a minute between, for example, December 21 and December 22.

Do You Bake at Home?

If you do, send for a grand cook book—crammed with recipes for all kinds of yeast-raised breads and cakes. It's absolutely free. Just drop a postcard with your name and address to Standard Brands Inc., 691 Washington St., New York City.—Adv.

Ample Proof

"Excuse me," said the mild little man in the crowded cafeteria, who had returned from getting a cup of coffee, "but you have my seat."

"Oh yeah," growled the big man. "Can you prove it?"
"Sure, look at the seat of your pants. You're sitting on my pie."

INDIGESTION

Does not harm the heart, but it can make one mighty uncomfortable. If gas seems to distend stomach, causing that embarrassing "gurgling" and crowding, try ADLA Tablets. They contain Bismuth and Carbonates for QUICK relief. Drug-gists have ADLA Tablets.

Best Occupation

Agriculture for an honorable and high-minded man, is the best of all occupations or arts by which men procure the means of living.—Xenophon.

FOR WOMEN ONLY!

If you suffer from monthly cramps, headache, backache, nervousness and distress of "irregularities" caused by functional monthly disturbances—try Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—famous for relieving pain and nervous feelings of women's "difficult days." Taken regularly—Lydia Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such annoying symptoms. Follow label directions. WORTH TRYING!

DARLING'S FERTILIZER grew contest corn on National and State Husking Fields.

1. NEW WORLD'S HUSKING RECORD (50.96) set on Theodore Schafer farm, LaSalle County, Illinois where both NATIONAL and Illinois State Contests were held on Darling fertilized fields.

2. Ralph Ford (Warren County) won the Indiana State Husking
Contest on the Steve Taylor farm where Darling's Soil Builders helped grow the corn.

3. An increased yield of 13 bu. per acre with Darling's Soil Builders on the Iowa State husking field convinced the owner, William Treimer, O'Brien county, that it pays well to use Darling's fertilizers.

4. The Wisconsin State Husking Contest won by Omar Koopman, was held in La Crosse county. Another winning field with Darling's Soil Builders.

Plan now to get "all out" production from your allotted acres. The surest and easiest way to increase crop yields, improve quality and build up land fertility, is by fertilizing every acre with DARLING'S SOIL BUILDERS.

Darling's have already felt the effect of priorities and shortages on some of the other products they manufacture, such as glycerine, animal fats and glue. They have had trouble getting certain fertilizer ingredients and hardly know from one day to the next what their position will be for getting out our spring fertilizer.

Definite orders already received are for more than double the tonnage a year ago at this time. They will continue to accept orders so long as they have anything to sell. Times are too uncertain to make any predictions, but our best advice to our customers is to place orders right away, and unless we already have your order, get it to us just as soon as you possibly can. Your definite order booked with us is the best protection we know of in these times.
